You are cordially invited to join Christopher Stief and William Wright for the Inaugural Fisher Phillips International Restrictive Covenants Conference.

This invitation-only conference is geared toward professionals who support U.S. based global employers with administering non-compete agreements and other restrictive covenants for a multinational workforce. Participants will share information and discuss strategies, while networking with professionals facing similar challenges.

This inaugural conference will also be organizational in nature, with discussion about how potential future conferences should be designed. Participants will be encouraged to share ideas and discuss what would make this event most useful to them.

This conference is designed for both in-house and outside counsel, as well as senior-level human resources executives and business leaders responsible for recruiting and retaining talent across a multi-national platform. Guests will include both U.S. counsel and legal practitioners from key jurisdictions around the world where many U.S. companies have operations.

The conference moderators will facilitate discussion aimed at generating a collaborative program that includes an active exchange of information and ideas.
