Employers are facing increasingly sophisticated data and security threats every day, as well as the challenge of managing a workforce that is mobile and plugged in 24/7. As companies continue to integrate computers, tablets, smart phones, and the cloud into their business models, the need to take cyber security seriously grows exponentially.

How do employers manage security threats created by these developments—while respecting the legal rights of their employees?

Seminar topics include:

- Employers' technological vulnerabilities.
- New challenges created by personal devices and social media.
- Limits on employee screening and monitoring.
- Legal steps employers can take to prevent or mitigate data theft or breach.
