Higher Education Compliance Bootcamp: Title IX and Beyond

The Independent Colleges and Universities of Florida is pleased to host a two-day Higher Education Compliance Bootcamp for higher education administrators on June 20 and 21 at Keiser University in Tampa, Florida.

This program will teach participants how to design a campus-wide compliance infrastructure that can be utilized to manage all compliance functions from Cabinet level to department level in a manner that reduces silos, increases effectiveness, and builds confidence in compliance efforts at all levels. Particular attention will be paid to Title IX and ADA compliance during this two-day session.

INSTRUCTORS

Scott Schneider heads the Higher Education Practice Group for Fisher Phillips and is a nationally recognized professional on higher education legal issues and institutional response to sex assault. He has litigated on behalf of education institutions around the country. He also provides expert witness testimony on matters dealing with institutional response to allegations of sexual misconduct and designs and delivers training programs on a host of education issues, including Title IX compliance obligations. He has provided training or delivered presentations for the National Association of College and University Attorneys, the Association of Student Conduct Administrators' Gehring Institute, and various associations of independent schools. In addition, Scott has been retained by the National Center for Campus Public Safety to serve as a faculty member for its Trauma-Informed Sexual Assault Investigation and Adjudication training program for campus officials.

Theresa Gallion is a partner in the Fisher Phillips Tampa office, a member in the Higher Education Practice Group and the founding partner of the Tampa and Orlando offices.
