The Fisher Phillips Women's Initiative and Leadership Council (WILC) cordially invites you to join us for an evening of camaraderie amongst peers on Thompson Island in Boston Harbor.

Enjoy a traditional New England clambake dinner and an unforgettable view of the Boston skyline as we share experiences and ideas to drive the professional advancement of women in Massachusetts and around the country.

The evening will begin with a short ferry across the harbor to picturesque Thompson Island. Return ferry service will take place after dinner and sunset. The ferry will depart from the Marine Industrial Park in South Boston.

Thompson Island is home to the Thompson Island Outward Bound Education Center and Fisher Phillips is pleased to support their mission of providing local youths with unique opportunities for academic and social-emotional growth beyond the classroom. Additional information about the Center and their programs appears at the bottom of this invitation.

Thompson Island Outward Bound Education Center

Each year, Thompson Island serves 6,500 youth from greater Boston with adventurous, rigorous learning experiences that accelerate both academic and social-emotional growth. From a multi-year STEM curriculum to sailing expeditions to summer jobs, time spent on Thompson Island is expanded learning that works, laying the groundwork for children's success in the classroom, workplace and community.

Founded to serve youth in 1833, and now working with students, teachers and school systems, the 204-acre Thompson Island is a local and national treasure located just one mile from downtown Boston. To augment the impact of philanthropic investments, Thompson Island manages a conference center and unique event facilities that allow the community to enjoy the island while supporting its youth programming.
