It's High Time To Engage Your Employees

Research conducted by a Gallup Poll suggests that a majority of American workers are not engaged in their jobs, with a key finding that the less engaged employees are with their work and their organization, the more likely they are to leave. Organizations often dedicate less thought and fewer resources to attracting and retaining talented employees. So not only are employers faced with the challenges of how to engage their workforce, but how to position them for success. In this session we will discuss how your organization can immediately engage and energize employees, developing a deeper connection essential to your organization's success.

3:00 – 4:00 PM

Federal Labor & Employment Law Compliance Under the New Administration

As we move into 2018 and beyond, what can we expect from the current Administration, Congress and federal regulatory agencies? This session explores how agencies, such as the National Labor Relations Board, the Department of Labor and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, intend to carry out their plans through rulemaking and regulations. Find out what these agencies have in store for your organization, and how these changes will impact a wide spectrum of employment practices ranging from hiring procedures to pay practices. We will explain how you can comply with these new and developing requirements while continuing to manage a quality workforce under challenging economic conditions.

4:00 – 5:00 PM
