From Hollywood to the White House, Americans are being inundated with news of sexual harassment in the workplace. Whether it's Harvey Weinstein, Mario Batali, Matt Lauer or other men in high-ranking positions, the conversation revolving around sexual harassment is a critical one that can no longer be addressed with simple annual anti-discrimination training.

Restaurants are particularly at risk given the informality of the workplace. Simply put, the culture of the service industry has to change.

Join Fisher Phillips attorney, Emily Litzinger, for an hour-long webinar on how your business can be proactive, rather than reactive to sexual harassment in the workplace.
