As social and political fault lines across the country grow more combative, so too does the task before those charged with managing employees or making decisions that impact the workplace. Heightened sensitivities, mandates for change, and a federal government often at loggerheads with its local counterparts leave businesses with an uneasy sense of what to expect and how best to move forward.

Join Fisher Phillips for a half-day employment law seminar designed to provide balanced information and practical solutions to some of the most important issues employers in New Jersey currently face.

Presentation topics will feature a forward-looking perspective on employment challenges brought on by this environment of uncertainty. Topics will include:

- Corporate Culture and Its Connection to Bullying Behavior
- Workplace Investigations in the Time of #MeToo and #TimesUp
- At the Breaking Point: An Examination of Mental Health Issues in the Workplace
