The National Labor Relations Board and California law have a history of taking a strong stance against employers who take action against employees making statements on social media. This includes instances when employees post disparaging comments about their employers online. In recent years, Court decisions have given us more guidance on what social media policies should look like and how employers should approach related issues. Please join us as Fisher Phillips attorney Katherine Sandberg addresses the best practices for employers regarding social media in light of recent developments in the law and tips for managing employee's online behavior.
