The average class actions settlement in California is $1.36 million. The long-life cycle of a class actions case can be especially costly for businesses. Fisher Phillips partners Aaron Olsen and Jim Fessenden have litigated numerous complex cases on behalf of California employers and are taking these lessons learned to train employers on how to properly set up administrative procedures and structure effective and practical personnel policies and protocols.

During this three-hour boot camp, we will focus on practical action items you can implement to avoid the onslaught of class action and PAGA litigation in California. The course will specifically cover:

- The importance of arbitration agreements, and critical distinctions that affect enforceability;
- The use (and abuse) of PAGA actions, and what you can do about it;
