With recent reports that the Coronavirus has been spreading undetected in Washington State and California, and other states, the Coronavirus (COVID-19) has landed in the United States. U.S. health officials are developing plans to respond, and further spread is likely more a question of when, not if. The virus is already impacting employers, and employers need to know what their responsibilities are. This webinar will address the following topics:

- What is the coronavirus and COVID-19?
- What is the current status of its reach?
- What is the government doing to manage the virus outbreak?
- What are employers' legal obligations related to the virus and its impact on employees?
- What steps can employers take to protect their employees and their businesses?
