QSR Magazine, a publication that covers the quick service restaurant industry, produced a special report on law firms that serve the hospitality industry and the article prominently featured Fisher Phillips . The magazine's editors asked HospitalityLawyer.com to identify some of the leading hospitality law firms. The article described Fisher Phillips: "This firm . . . is a powerhouse in labor and employment law and can handle most workplace issues including unionized workforces, workplace discrimination and harassment, immigration and tax compliance, and preventative measures including employee handbooks."

HospitalityLawyer.com developed its short list based on the number of attorneys working with the industry, the number of office locations, the number of years the firm has had attorneys focused on hospitality, and the areas of experience found within the firm's hospitality law practice. The magazine listed only five firms, including Fisher Phillips . Mike Mitchell, of the New Orleans office and Mark Ricciardi of Las Vegas were listed in the section showing firms with dedicated practices in the hospitality industry.
