

Avoid Five I-9 Mistakes

News

9.07.11

Atlanta immigration attorney Jessica Cook contributed to a guide published by I-9 Compliance.com entitled "Avoid Five I-9 Mistakes." It is important for employers to know that the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency has taken on an effort to aggressively audit and investigate companies for Form I-9 compliance. Jessica offered advice about "Mistake Number 3: Re-verifying All Existing Employees." The guide noted that this practice would lead to non-compliance. Jessica said: "Re-verify I-9 forms for employees with expiring work authorization. Create a tickler system of expiring work authorization and re-verify expiring work authorization before the expiration date. Do not re-verify permanent residence cards, driver's licenses or U.S. passports."
