LOS ANGELES, CA (September 17, 2012) – Michelle Lee Flores was selected by editors of The Recorder as one of its 2012 "Women Leaders in Law." Flores and 39 other California women lawyers were honored for their creativity and effort in building and sustaining connections that create opportunities for their firms or organizations.

Flores is a partner in the Fisher Phillips Los Angeles office where she focuses her practice on all aspects of employment litigation, including jury and bench trials, arbitration, mediation and pre-litigation negotiations, wage and hour violations and wrongful termination. She is well known in the community through speaking engagements and board roles with the Beverly Hills Bar Association, University of California Press Foundation and the Mexican American Bar Foundation.

"Michelle leads by action and brings valuable insight to our clients as well as our associates," said Tamara Devitt, managing partner for the Los Angeles office of Fisher Phillips. "From her role as the social chair of the labor and employment section of the Beverly Hills Bar Association to her mentor role for tomorrow's attorneys, she is a positive presence to clients, prospects and colleagues."
